Maryland Update

Today, Governor Hogan encouraged local jurisdictions and local liquor boards to enforce directives that are in place to control the spread of the coronavirus. He is concerned with the increasing number of COVID-19 cases connected to non-compliance with public health requirements, particularly in bars and restaurants.

Current rules for Maryland bars and restaurants:

- Bars and restaurants are open for seated service only, with physical distancing and capacity restrictions.
- Customers must be seated at least six feet apart from other guests.
- Standing and congregating in bar areas is strictly prohibited.
- All staff must wear a face covering while working and interacting with customers.
- Restaurants or bars with booths must have every other booth closed.
- No more than six people may sit at a table.
